Soccer: No. 3 Holy Innocents hosts Lady Indians to open Class A State Tournament

Towns County men's season comes to a close at Class AAA Lumpkin County

Towns County soccer celebrated its members of the Class of 2017 following last week's game with Wesleyan. The Lady Indian seniors helped turn the program around with two consecutive state playoff berths and 17 wins over the last two years. They won just 10 games during their first two years on campus. With the playoffs opening this week, the Lady Indians' faced some of its toughest competition of the season last week in No. 1 Wesleyan and Class AAA's No. 5 Lumpkin County.

Following a 1-1 tie at the half, Wesleyan pulled away 3-1 in the second half as Towns County hosted Senior Night.

On Thursday they traveled to Lumpkin where they fell

2-0 to close out the season with an 8-5 record.

As a reward, the Lady Indians will visit 3rd ranked Holy Innocents (12-4-1) on Tuesday at 5 p.m.

However, Holy Innocents, like Towns, will enter winless in its last two games after dropping a 5-4 contest at Paideia - who defeated the Lady Indians in last year's state tournament - and playing Class AAA's Pace Academy to a 2-2 tie, five days later.

Holy Innocents also got off to a bumpy start in 2017, dropping two of its first three before reeling off eight wins in-a-row.

The streak ended when Class AAA's Lovett edged them 1-0 on April 4.

The Lady Bears would win its next four games before falling at Paideia - their only region loss of the season.

Towns will be making its second straight trip to the postseason, while Holy Innocents missed out last season as a member of a loaded Region 6-AA that sent three teams to the final four.

Jones Bumps To Bristol Xfinity Win

BRISTOL, TN - Erik Jones put a bump and run move on Ryan Blaney with 22 laps to go in Saturday's 300-lap Xfinity Series race, and held on for his second Bristol win.

Blaney was leading after a restart, while Jones, who led 27 laps moved into second. As the field of cars entered turn-3, Jones gave Blaney a nudge, causing Blaney to wiggle. This allowed Jones to take over the lead, while Blaney slipped back to fourth.

"We were racing hard and I was able to get by and hang on there at the end," said Jones.

There were two more restarts during the last 16 laps, and Blaney was able to work his way back up to second.

"He got under me and I wasn't going to back out," said Blaney. "I'm not going to say what happened, I guess we just have to let it go as one of those racing deals."

Daniel Suarez was third, followed by Elliott Sadler, Daniel Hemric, Ty Dillon, Kyle Larson, Brennan Poole, Blake Koch, Michael Annett. Things became heated in the pits after Ross Chastain and Jeremy Clements confronted each other on pit road during a red flag period brought out by rain.

Clements appeared to approach Chastain from behind to initiate a discussion, but when he grabbed Chastain, the driver turned and punched Clements.

Clements went to the care center and emerged wearing sunglasses before he continued the race.

"Somebody grabbed me by my shoulders and kind of pushed me," Chastain said. "I just turned around and saw who it was. I hope he realizes now that he can talk, we can talk, but you can't grab someone by the shoulders. That happened before and I said right then I wouldn't let it happen again."

Top-10 leaders after 7 of 33: 1. Sadler-260, 2. Byron-244, 3. Allgaier-200, 4. Reed-184, 5. Hemric-180, 6. Wallace Jr.-180, 7. Koch-164, 8. Poole-163, 9. Tift-160, 10. Annett-157.

GIBBS AND HENDRICK OFF TO BAD START

Two of NASCAR's biggest and most powerful teams are struggling to live up to expectations. Hendrick Motorsports has one win after eight races into the season, while Joe Gibbs teams have yet to find victory lane.

Both organizations have almost as much money as god, but money hasn't been able to bring them the sought after wins. But that doesn't mean that money isn't important. There is an old adage in racing, "Money buys speed".

While NASCAR's most

successful teams usually have more of the green stuff than the also-ran teams, it doesn't always equate to success.

Out of the four Hendrick teams (Dale Earnhardt Jr., Kasey Kahne, Chase Elliott, and Jimmie Johnson), only Johnson has a win.

"We feel confident we are a winning team," said Earnhardt. "Just because we haven't won doesn't mean we aren't capable. I think we have the potential to win at any track, and I think the wins will come. I don't know where or when, but they are out there."

Rick Hendrick used some of his pocket change last week to buy the first 2018 Chevrolet Camaro ZL1, bearing the VIN number 001. Hendrick bid $250,000 to claim the car at Barrett-Jackson auction in Palm Beach, Florida.

Joe Gibbs is a hands-on person. He has a great relationship with all his team players, and usually knows how the game plan is going.

"We're very disappointed in the start to the season," said Gibbs. "We need to get going."

Before the season even started, JGR was hit by the unexpected departure of veteran driver Carl Edwards, who decided to step away from NASCAR racing as a driver.

They brought up their 2016 Xfinity Series champion, Daniel Suarez to take over the No. 19 Toyota. Four races into the season, his crew chief, Dave Rogers, left the team on an indefinite personal leave of absence.

Kyle Busch is the highest JGR driver in points. Busch is seventh in the series standings and he's the only JGR driver with more than one top-five finish through seven races (he has two). Matt Kenseth has one and neither Suarez nor Denny Hamlin have registered a top-five. Hamlin is 15th in points, Kenseth is 22nd and Suarez is 23rd.

"Looking at just (my team), I think we've been off," said Kenseth. "We haven't run real well. "We ran good at Atlanta but the rest of the races, we really haven't run very well. Some things are circumstances, but if we get to running better, that cures a lot of your problems."

With all the engineers, someone is bound to stumble on the problem.

Local hiking club works to protect Appalachian Trail

Thirty-one members and guests of the Georgia Appalachian Trail Club interrupted their Easter weekend celebration to help "protect" the Appalachian Trail. On Saturday, April 15, 2017 just north of Unicoi Gap, (Hwy. 175 south of Hiwassee), volunteers did much more than just talk about protection by doing the hard work required. There were 32 "jobs" planned for the portion of trail worked on that day and many of the logs needed for the repair work had already been cut and waited for placement. Volunteers were divided into 7 crews and went to work early in the morning of the 15th. Many difficult problems were encountered but the crews overcame the difficulties and transformed bad trail into good trail! By the end of the day, all 32 jobs had been completed.

This part of the AT is now a pleasure to walk even though it continues to be steep. Thanks to all 31 people who worked on April 15, especially the "crew chiefs"!
