GHSA delays football season opener until Sept. 4

Remaining fall sports expected to begin on time

Thomaston - Football fans in Georgia will have to wait two more weeks for Friday night lights.

On Monday, July 20, the Georgia High School Association's Board of Trustees (BOT) voted unanimously to postpone all high school football games (including preseason scrimmages) by two weeks. Initially slated for an Aug. 21 kickoff, the 2020 football season will now get underway Sept. 4.

Practice dates are unaffected, and July 27 remains the official statewide start for football conditioning. Additionally, the GHSA does not expect to deviate from the standard 10-game, five-week playoff format.

All other fall sports will continue on their regular timetable.

The two-week football delay passed during last week's meeting after the board rejected Jesse Crews' proposal to stick with the current schedule. Glenn White followed with the accepted motion to delay the start of all football competition by two weeks.

According to Steven Craft and Jasper Jewell, the Atlanta Public School System could see a total cancellation of fall sports should the board refuse to amend the schedule.

However, Kevin Petroski came to the defense of rural school, pointing out a delay on the gridiron would impact winter sports at smaller systems that depend heavily on multi-sport athletes more so than their larger counterparts.

Walton County parent, Amy Henry, also addressed the board, discussing the importance of sports to high schoolers and how the benefits of playing outweigh the risks associated with COVID-19.

As of this writing, Alabama and Mississippi are the only southeastern states expecting to begin the regular season in August. North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee plan to start on Sept. 4, while Florida recently delayed its opening night until late-September.

So far, Virginia is the lone southeastern state to cancel high school football outright, although the VHSL (Virginia High School League) isn't ruling out the possibility of a spring season.

In other prep news, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) recently joined the American Academy of Pediatrics with their endorsement of a brick-and-mortar reopening to the 2020-21 school year.

"The best available evidence indicates if children become infected, they are far less likely to suffer severe symptoms," the CDC statement read. "Death rates among school-aged children are much lower than among adults. At the same time, the harms attributed to closed schools on the social, emotional, and behavioral health, economic well-being, and academic achievement of children, in both the short-and long-term, are well-known and significant. Further, the lack of in-person educational options disproportionately harms low-income and minority children and those living with disabilities. "These students are far less likely to have access to private instruction and care and far more likely to rely on key school-supported resources like food programs, special education services, counseling, and after-school programs to meet basic developmental needs."

"Aside from a child's home, no other setting has more influence on a child's health and well-being than their school. The in-person school environment does the following: provides educational instruction; supports the development of social and emotional skills; creates a safe environment for learning; addresses nutritional needs; and facilitates physical activity."
